MARTINICE - THE HEART OF CZECH HUNTING TRADITION

Pheasant and partridge shooting in the Czech Republic is deeply rooted in aristocratic heritage, shaped by centuries of refinement under the Habsburg monarchy. Often regarded as a cradle of driven shooting in Eastern Europe, the region combines British-style high-bird traditions with the distinctive philosophy of Myslivost — a culture of thoughtful game management and year-round respect for land and wildlife. Here, hunting is not simply a sport, but a living tradition built on precision, stewardship, and authenticity.

Set across 1,100 hectares of rolling countryside, forests, ponds, and carefully managed habitats, Martinice offers a truly diverse sporting experience. High-flying pheasants driven over valleys and mature woodland challenge even experienced guns, while expertly organized duck days on traditional Czech ponds deliver impressive bags in a setting defined by heritage and professionalism.

The estate's commitment to sustainability — from in-house game rearing to grey partridge restoration programmes — ensures that sport and conservation exist in perfect balance.

Driven days are complemented by authentic walked-up hunts, where hunters and dogs move quietly through the landscape, reconnecting with the essence of traditional field sport. Every detail, from transport across land and water to refined hospitality and ceremonial customs, reflects the timeless elegance of Czech shooting culture.

Evenings conclude at the modern forester's lodge or at the nearby Wellness Hotel Equitana, where comfort, excellent cuisine, and a relaxed atmosphere provide the perfect setting to share stories from the field. Martinice is not just a destination — it is an immersive journey into one of Europe's most historic and authentic wingshooting traditions.
